The flag seems to have been the result of the work commenced by Washington, Dr. Franklin, Mr Lynch, Mr. Harrison, and Colonel Joseph Reed. On the 2d of Janus ry, 1777, Washington was in the American camp at Cambridge, organizing the new army which was theat day created. The committee of conference, consisting of Franklin, Lynch, and Harrison, sent by Jongress to arrange with Washir oton the details of the army, wer's with him. Colonel Reed, one of the aides-de-camp, was also secretary of the Committee of Confer-

Reed and his associates. The flag in use by the army was a plain red field, with the British union of the erosses of St. George, St. Andrew, and St. Patrick on the upper left corner. Several gentlemen of Boston sent to the American camp copies of the King's speech. It was received at the date mentioned above, and the effect is described in the

THE OLD HOME.

AN ENGLISH POEM. Yes, still the same, the same old spot; The years may go, the years may come, Yet through them all there changeth not The old familiar home.

The poplars by the old mill stream, A trifle tailer may have grown; The ivies round the turret green Perchance more thickly thrown; Yet still the same green lanes are here

That brought their violet sets in Spring, And heard through many a golden year Of children, in the April morn, Knee deep in yellow cowslips' bloom; Of lovers' whispers lightly borne

Through sultry twilight gloom. And out upon the red-bricked town, The quaint old houses stand the same; The same old sign swings at the crown, Ablaze in sunset flame.

Yet still 'tis not the same old spot-The old familiar friends are gone. I ask of strangers who know them not; All strangers, every one.

The morning brooks may sing the same; The white thorns blossom in the May; But each long loved, remembered name

Hatching-Eggs. Eggs for hatching should be chosen of the fair average size usually laid by the hen they are from, any unusually large or small being rejected. Some hens lay immensely large eggs, and others small ones. A fat hen will always lay small eggs, which can only produce small and weakly chickens. Absolute size in eggs is, therefore, of but little importance. Round short eggs are asually the best to select; very long eggs especially if much pointed at the small end, almost always breed birds with some awkwardness in style of carriage. Neither should rough-shelled eggs be chosen; they usually show some derangement f the organs and are often sterile. HOUSSHOLD RECIPES.
